ONE WISE UNFINISHED DREAMER DEVELOPED DREAMS IN DREAMWEAVING
 THE ART OF TURNING IDEAS INTO CREATIVE REALITY

There is an increasing focus on developing the management skills of future business leaders. The business school curriculum is seen to be deficient in addressing practice and leadership issues, and interventions to enhance the management education experience have resulted from industry and policy bodies. Interventions have ranged from both short-term (e.g. training) and long-term (e.g. curriculum change) approaches. However, little is known about the effectiveness of such interventions. This paper reports on a study of the effectiveness of a short-term intervention, the Leadership Initiative for Women, in enhancing the leadership skills of business school students. The study involved a pre-test, post-test and follow-up design. The results suggest that the intervention had a positive impact on students' leadership skills and confidence, and that the impact was maintained three months post-intervention. Overall, the study has implications for the design of management education interventions that aim to enhance the leadership skills of business school students.
